

MA/PG Dip/PG Cert in Special Educational Needs and Inclusion

Who is this for?

- Graduates with an honours degree or UK Level 6 equivalent
- Professionals who have experience of working with children, young people and adults with a range of special educational needs and/or disabilities

Who is this taught by?

The tutors are nationally and internationally renowned for their research and experience in promoting inclusive practice.

How do you study?

A key strength of our programme is our blended learning approach. This provides the opportunity to learn collaboratively both face to face and online. Our integrated learning environment provides access to course materials and to a well-resourced library enabling students to access e books and electronic journals from home. Assessment procedures are flexible and sensitive to either personal interests or existing professional workloads. Assignments are usually based on aspects of work currently on going in our participants' own professional context. There are no exams.

Possible Entry points

Students or teachers who have gained credits at M Level 7 from Northampton or from other universities can apply to use these towards the MA in SEN and Inclusion if they can demonstrate that their studies have been in the field

The National College of Teaching and Learning awards such as NPQH and LFTM also carry points so do check with the course leaders although a piece of submitted work is required

How can this programme support your career?

Our former students have used the expertise developed on the course to assist them in seeking more senior posts within education. Some use the MA as a stepping stone to PhD study and see this as a helpful route into an academic career:

'I am a teacher and senior leader at a special needs school, who completed a MA in SEN at the University of Northampton 3 years ago. The MA gave me the opportunity to learn 'on the job' and the chance to mix my learning and teaching to really make a difference to both the children and myself. I found that the tutors were all highly experienced, supportive and great to discuss ideas with. As someone who prefers to talk through problems I was relieved to find that the tutors always had the time to do this. I also had the chance to share experiences and skills with other teachers who were on the course. Doing my MA has really had a big impact on my teaching and I would recommend it to anyone. I'm even looking to continue to my PhD now!' Rebecca Tungate
